

The Long Island University Athletics Department, a NCAA Division I member of the Northeast Conference, is accepting applications for a Head Women's Golf Coach. The position is responsible for administering all aspects of the women's golf program with a commitment to University, Conference and NCAA policies, procedures, and regulations.

Head Coach will identify and successfully recruit academically and athletically talented student-athletes; provide teaching, mentoring and coaching; develop well-rounded student-athletes ensuring academic progress and graduation; direct practice sessions, evaluations of opponents and competitive coaching situations; and maintain a competitive and successful Women's Golf program. Must establish and maintain an environment conducive to the welfare, development and academic success of the student-athletes. Must effectively manage the program's budget and staff; coordinate support services and appropriate public relations and promotional activities necessary for program success; other administrative duties. Must establish and maintain effective interactions with the university community and administrators, alumni, donors, media and the public.

Requires an excellent work ethic along with exceptional motivational, coaching/teaching, leadership, communication and recruiting skills. Candidates are expected to be committed to multiculturalism and working with a diverse student body. Requires the ability to travel extensively including overnight stays for recruiting and competitions.

Minimum Requirements

- Bachelor's degree
- Three to five years of successful collegiate/professional/golf coaching or professional playing experience
- Proven experience working with and improving the performance of elite women's golf student-athletes
- Demonstrated successful leadership experience
- Track record of strong commitment to a positive student-athlete experience and ensuring student-athlete welfare is paramount
- Valid Driver's License

Professional Competencies

- High-level written, interpersonal, and oral communication skills
- Ability to work effectively with faculty, staff and students from a variety of diverse backgrounds and a demonstrated dedication to the full academic and social development of student-athletes
- Knowledge of NCAA rules and interpretations
- Experience as women's golf Coach at the Division I collegiate level
- Ability to motivate and lead student-athletes toward competitive and academic success
- Experience recruiting Division I level student-athletes

Candidates should also possess an enthusiasm for working with individual athletes, a strong golf background, excellent oral and written communication skills, a solid work-ethic, and a commitment to NCAA rules. Strong computer skills are a plus.